

GROUP LIFE

Portability vs. conversion

With Sun Life Financial Group Life and AD&D plans, employees can take their coverage with them by porting or converting. Portability and conversion help employees keep coverage when they are no longer eligible for the employer-sponsored group plan. Here's how portability and conversion work.

About portability

Portability means that you take with you—or “port”—your group coverage after employment ends. Porting is a good solution for employees who are 69 years old or younger and are not terminating employment due to retirement, illness, or injury. Ported coverage is term life insurance to age 70, and the employee pays premium for coverage directly to Sun Life.

Porting is available with Basic, Optional, and Voluntary Life and AD&D plans. Other eligibility and state restrictions may apply.

About conversion

Conversion means you change—or “convert”—your group coverage to an individual policy without having to answer any medical questions. Conversion may be a good solution for employees who are leaving a job, reducing hours, retiring, or have reached an age when group coverage may be reduced or eliminated. Converted coverage is permanent universal life insurance.

Our conversion option is called Sun Universal ProtectorPlus and is available with Basic, Optional, and Voluntary Life coverage. Conversion is not available for AD&D plans.

We make it easy

We understand that benefits administrators are busy managing personnel changes when portability and conversion become an issue. That's why we help to make these options easy for employers to communicate and easy for employees to understand.

For employers, we can provide standard portability and conversion notices that make notifying their employees of their port and conversion rights simple. Employees can then call our customer service representatives, who will review the employee's coverage and assist them with their application.

Once we have enrolled an employee, we take care of them through the duration of their coverage with Sun Life.
